Hickman Won.

More baseball talent was represented on the local diamond last Thursday than was ever in Hickman before, when Memphis, of the Southern League, and Minneapolis, champions of the American Association, played before a large audience.

The game will long be remembered by local fans as the first really professional game that was ever played and such old timers and noted men in that particular sport as Waddell, Krock, Williams, Ferris, Rossman, Bernard, Clymer, and last but not least, Cantillon, who has been before the public in the capacity of manager for a number of years and who has made a fortune or two out of the game, will be remembered as having performed before a Hickman audience.

Clouse, an Indian pitcher, started the game, and with the exception of a little nervousness pitched pretty good ball until the seventh inning when Waddell was called to the mound to stop any possible chance of Memphis making another score. The Memphis team is composed of some mighty good players, and for a time it seemed that they would come off victors, especially did the hopes of the loyal Minneapolis rooters fall when Swahn, of Memphis, knocked the ball out of the lot.

Cantillon has a bunch of ball players that will be hard to down at any stage of the game—men well seasoned in the school of baseball experience who fight to win until the last ball is out. Such spirit will win many games when luck is down on them.

Cantillon took his bunch of regulars to Memphis Friday where he was scheduled to play two games, but the Sunday game was the only one played, Minneapolis winning, with Peaster a Mississippi recruit going the full route.

During their stay in Hickman this spring the team made friends with every citizen and every effort was made to entertain the players. Hickman got a whole lot of free advertising—and some roasting at the hands of some erstwhile sport writers who could think of no better dope with which to preserve their meal tickets. While the town in general was treated with respect, there was a vein of ridicule running through the dope that our citizens did not like.

But next year, we want to entertain the Minneapolis Club again, and Hickman's hospitality has never yet been questioned.

The ingredients are on the carton. Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey contains no habit producing drugs, and always gives satisfaction. Look for the bell on the bottle.

Mrs. W. A. Johnston and children returned Sunday from a visit with relatives at Brownsville, Tenn. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Johnston's sister, Miss Callista Mann, who will spend a few days in Hickman.

Ike DeLeon was here from Bayouville, Monday. Mr. DeLeon tells us that he has over 50 acres of cotton ground ready for planting. Also that many farmers of that section, who have never before raised cotton, are preparing to raise a crop this year.

Isn't it about time, and in the natural order of things, for Postmaster J. T. Stephens to add a concrete post making outfit to his concrete block factory? Those are coming into general use, and Hickman is the finest place on earth to make them. Sand and labor are plentiful and freight rates are O. K. for bringing in cement and sending out the finished product.

Rev. McGarvey Dead.

Rev. W. J. McGarvey, Jr., who conducted a revival meeting at the Christian Church in this city just about a year ago, died at Dyersburg, Tenn., Wednesday of last week, of apoplexy.

Deceased was conducting a meeting at Dyersburg at the time of his death. His home was at Mayfield. While in Hickman he made many friends who will be shocked to learn of his demise. He was undoubtedly a good man, and had faithfully devoted his life to the uplift of humanity.
